Columbia student 'Carries That Weight' to graduation

Emma Sulkowicz carried her mattress across the stage at Columbia College's Class Day on Tuesday — apparently against the wishes of Columbia University.

Sulkowicz began carrying her dorm room mattress around campus when the school year began as part of her senior thesis, a performance art piece called "Mattress Performance (Carry That Weight)," meant to address the administration's handling of her alleged rape.

She accused student Paul Nungesser, who also graduated Tuesday, of rape in 2012. Nungesser was later cleared of assault, and earlier this year filed a lawsuit against the university, claiming it permanently damaged his reputation.

Columbia found Nungesser "not responsible" for the alleged rape charges, and his name was not made public until Sulkowicz filed a police report in May 2014. The New York district attorney declined to charge him with a crime, citing a lack of reasonable suspicion.

Teo Armus, deputy news editor at the Columbia Spectator, said on Twitter during the ceremony that Sulkowicz did not shake Columbia President Lee Bollinger's hand. Armus also tweeted out photos of Nungesser attending the ceremony in cap and gown.

Zoe Ridolfi-Starr was one of four women who helped Sulkowicz carry her mattress on Tuesday.

"It was extremely meaningful. It means a lot to people beyond Emma and myself, and all the other survivors in the audience," Ridolfi-Starr told Metro in a phone call after the ceremony.

Ridolfi-Starr said hundreds of students put red tape on their hats in solidarity of the movement. "The administration tried to discourage us from doing it, and has been alienating for the last several years of my life," said Ridolfi-Starr. "She [Emma] was clear the whole time this was part of her plan, what she had to do confines of her piece."

Ridolfi-Starr, who is the lead complainant in a Title IX discrimination complaint against the university and who started a support group for survivors, previously told Metro that she was sexually assaulted during her freshman year.

Since she started carrying her mattress, SUNY schools have adopted a sexual assault policy that requires both parties to verbally give consent, and Gov. Andrew Cuomo has embarked on a campaign to bring the policy to all state schools.

Leading the way

Sulkowicz's piece inspired similar movements on college campuses across the country. In October, students at Columbia and an additional 130 groups around the world held a National Day of Action for "Carry That Weight Together," and Sulkowicz attended the State of the Union address with Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand.

Fair warning

"We communicated to all students that the shared celebratory purpose of Class Day and Commencement calls for mutual respect for the security and comfort of graduating students and their families in attendance. We are not going to comment on individual students; it is a day for all members of the Class of 2015.

We were not going to physically block entry to graduates who are ultimately responsible for their own choices." Earlier in the week, the university sent an email warning students not to bring large objects to commencement.

"Graduates should not bring into the ceremonial area large objects which could interfere with the proceedings or create discomfort to others in close, crowded spaces shared by thousands of people," the email said, according to the Spectator. The campus newspaper reported emails sent regarding the last two graduations did not specifically bar "ceremonial large objects."

Crime Stoppers. NYPD debuts high-tech van to help solve crimes

The NYPD is going high-tech in hopes of the public helping to solve more crimes.

Police Commissioner Bill Bratton unveiled a new Crime Stoppers van on Tuesday that will appear at crime scenes around the city, showing photos and videos of wanted suspects within hours of the incident.

"This van will show up at significant crime scenes and working with us to help push out information very quickly on crime information that is available at that time to the public," Bratton said.

The $90,000 van was donated by the New York City Police Foundation. METRO

Juan Rodriguez, who has run a small market in La Marqueta for two years, says he hopes the money coming to renovate the space will help business. / AARON ADLER, METRO

Vendy Plaza enters 2nd summer at La Marqueta

East Harlem. Metro spoke with Cesar Fuentes about the food truck phenomenon.

Cesar Fuentes grew up selling pupusas — a Salvadorean corn tortillas dish — on New York City streets with his mother, who dreamed of being an entrepreneur.

Fuentes, who worked his way up the food ranks and spent the last 15 years managing Red Hook Food Vendors, is taking the reins of Vendy Plaza at La Marqueta, which is back for a second summer at the historic East Harlem location.

On Sunday, La Marqueta officially opens for the season.

Every Sunday through Sept. 9, Vendy Plaza will be open on Park Avenue and 116th Street, with up to 30 food vendors, as well as live music, local beer and cooking demonstrations.

Food trucks are big business in New York City, bringing in an estimated $15 million a year in revenue, according to the New York City Food Policy Center.

"On one extreme you have the hipster food trucks, those who become stars in the industry, the high-end food trucks," Fuentes said. "And on the other you have your local vendors, those who often go under the radar. New York has developed a very competitive market, and if you don't have a name out there, you're not going to get the chance to score a big number of people coming in."

Cesar's 3 reasons to go

The food

"You'll be able to experience some of the best culinary treats that you can find in all of NYC, all under one roof."

The roof itself

"Whether it rains or shines, Vendy Plaza is under the tracks of the Metro-North, so that means literally, it's an outdoor market not affected by rain at all. You don't have to break your plans because of bad weather."

The ambiance

"You will be able to be a part of history because we're actively a part of revitalizing La Marqueta, East Harlem and creating a culinary hub."

Smart Luxuries—Surprising Prices

New York City pharmacy caters to the 1 percent at $6,500 a month

You fancy, huh?
The pharmacy program currently has five members.

Ever felt Duane Reade and Rite Aid were just too plebeian for you? If so, luxury pharmacy Cedra may be the answer.

Cedra, which has a branch on the Upper East Side, is a full-service pharmacy that fills prescriptions and sells supplements like any other pharmacy. The difference? Cedra is a members-preferred store. Customers who want to become members need to reach deep into their pockets for the $2,500 to $6,500 per month fees.

Anyone can shop at Cedra, but memberships offer perks like a personalized concierge service.

"It's not just going to the pharmacy," said Mazen Karnaby, CEO of Cedra. "It's like having your own concierge pharmacist with you every day, no matter the time of day. If you're in Italy and you need your medicine, we'll send it to you. We take a lot of the job of the doctor because they don't spend a lot of time with patients these days."

Karnaby said the program comes with personal nutritionists, masseuses, trainers and limo drivers who take patients to and from the doctor's office. Pharmacists also make house calls.

Cedra is not just for patients who want to be more informed about their prescriptions; Karnaby describes it as a "health concierge service."

What do patients get for their money? The Grand Cedra membership, which is the lowest rung, costs $2,500 and includes a blood glucose meter, 24-hour emergency support, free diabetic strips, a weekly at-home medication review with a pharmacist, a monthly nutritionist consultation, two massages a month, semi-weekly personal training, unlimited limo service to the doctor's and nurse accompaniment to the doctor's office.

A look inside the swanky pharmacy known as Cedra / CEDRA

The highest tier of membership at Cedra is Cedra Select, which, at $6,500 is for cancer patients who need extra attention. This includes the same perks as Grand Cedra, but also offers a monthly supply of vitamins and supplements and a customized personal care regimen, such as skin treatments, natural wigs, prosthetic fittings and more.

Six things you need

1 Texas police seek motorcycle gang truce

Texas police asked rival motorcycle gangs on Tuesday to put aside their differences after a weekend brawl at a Waco restaurant that left nine people dead and 18 injured, calling for a halt to the carnage and threats of revenge attacks.

"There has been enough tragedy, and there has been enough bloodshed in Waco, Texas. We would appreciate there not being any more," police Sgt. Patrick Swanton told a news briefing.

He added that threats for reprisal against police from motorcycle gangs have "toned down" but are still a worry for law enforcement officials, who arrested 170 people following Sunday's brawl at the Twin Peaks Sports Bar and Grill in the central Texas city.

Twin Peaks / GETTY IMAGES

Of the 18 injured, seven remain in the hospital, and all are in stable condition. Few of those involved in the deadly brawl are from the Waco area, Swanton said.

The nine killed ranged in age from 27 to 65, and a preliminary autopsy report indicates they all died from gunshot wounds, the justice of the peace in Waco said, TV broadcaster NBCDFW reported.

Those arrested were being held on bail of $1 million each in separate parts of a county jail to prevent an outbreak of violence, county officials said. REUTERS

2 US charges six Chinese nationals with economic espionage

The U.S. government charged six Chinese nationals with economic espionage, saying they stole secrets from two companies that develop technology often used in military systems.

It was the third time in as many years that U.S. authorities have made accusations of economic espionage conducted on behalf of China, a sign that the United States is increasingly focused on what it has termed a top national security concern.

State Department spokesman Jeff Rathke said the U.S. is committed to protecting trade secrets. REUTERS

Beau Biden, a son of Vice President Joe Biden, was hospitalized at Walter Reed Army Medical Center outside Washington, the vice president's office said on Tuesday.

The former Delaware attorney general has a history of health problems. He suffered what was described as a mild stroke in 2010. And in 2013, he became disoriented while on family vacation and later underwent a procedure to remove a small brain lesion.

Airbnb faces setback as San Francisco may limit stays

San Francisco may become the second California city in a month to limit the length of stays arranged by accommodation services like Airbnb, which matches people wishing to rent out all or part of their homes to temporary guests.

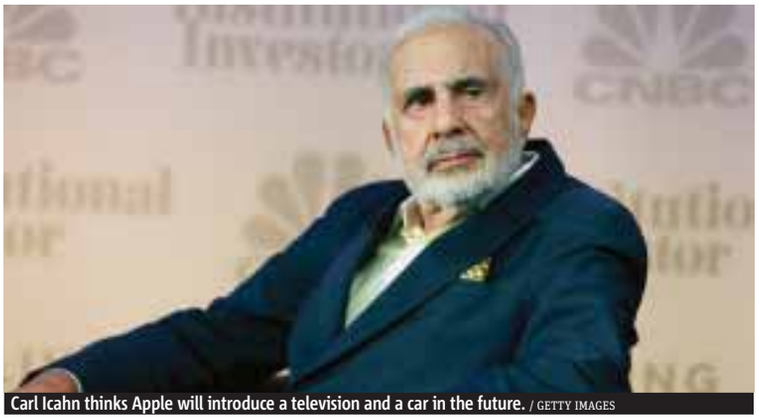
CNBC: Carl Icahn says Apple will still introduce TV, car



Carl Icahn thinks Apple will introduce a television and a car in the future. / GETTY IMAGES

Stock. Carl Icahn owned about 53 million Apple shares at the end of the first quarter.

Billionaire activist investor Carl Icahn and Brett Icahn, his son and portfolio manager, on Tuesday stuck to their views that Apple Inc. would introduce a television set and a car.

The elder Icahn, in an interview with cable business channel CNBC, also said his disagreement with the technology giant was over the company not doing bigger share buybacks.

"I believe they will do a TV," Icahn said, added that "the one thing that I disagree with the company on is not buying a great deal more stock."

Brett Icahn said, "We believe they're going to do a car."

In an open letter to Apple Chief Executive Officer Tim Cook on his website on Monday, Icahn said Apple should be trading at $240, nearly double its current price, and he believed the company was poised to enter the television market by 2016 and the automobile market by 2020.

The Wall Street Journal, citing sources familiar with the matter, reported Monday that Apple had scrapped plans to introduce an ultra-high-definition television set more than a year ago.

Icahn portfolio manager David Schechter said, "It is dangerous to assume that they're not going to introduce new products in new categories in the future." REUTERS

Apple buybacks and Icahn

Icahn, who has pushed Apple to boost buybacks since announcing his stake in the company in August 2013, said his prodding had helped the company. Apple boosted its repurchase program in April to $140 billion from the $90 billion announced last year.

"I think I helped the company. I think I did, and I think few could deny that some of my influence, maybe some, helped them to buy more stock, and that's all I'm trying to do again," Icahn said. REUTERS

Party pooper. Feces from a plane ruins girl's Sweet 16 party

This one gives new meaning to the phrase "party pooper."

A girl's Sweet 16 party was ruined after feces — apparently from an airplane — fell from the sky Sunday in Levittown, Bucks County, according to FOX 29.

"Out of nowhere, from the sky, comes a bunch of feces [and] lands on her," Joe Cambray, father of birthday girl Jacinda, told FOX 29.

The fecal bomb landed on a canopy that Joe had bought to protect the party from rain. Luckily, the cake had already been moved inside.

The station reports that Joe's sister used a smartphone app to figure out that five planes were in the area at the time of the plop.

It's not clear that the waste actually came from a plane, but there are periodic reports of so-called blue ice.

A 2012 Explainer from Slate says that planes usually store sewage in tanks, that are to be suctioned by ground crews. But occasionally, those tanks leak.

The folks at the blog Gizmodo note that people sometimes mistake bird poo for number two from a plane, but those mistakes typically happen in the fall, when birds are migrating. DAN KELLEY, METRO

1 Sofia Vergara reconsiders the baby question

Sofia Vergara apparently has a different take on the parenting question with fiance Joe Manganiello for each magazine she talks to. She's now on the cover of Redbook and saying the baby issue will have to be addressed sooner rather than later, so forget any of her previous statements about it not being a priority. "Joe is younger than me. He's 38. He's never had kids. How am I going to say no?" she tells the magazine. "I tell him, 'If we're going to do this, we have to do it, like, now because I don't want to be 50 with a baby.'" Seems reasonable.

Also of note — Vergara is still amazed at how good everything is going with Manganiello. "I finally realized that relationships don't need to be so much work. Ever since we met, it's been so easy," she says. "I'm very suspicious. I'm like, 'It's not normal that we've been together for nine months, and we haven't had a big fight or anything.'" But not suspicious enough to reconsider that walk down the aisle, apparently.

3 Ronda Rousey has a twisted sense of humor

I knew UFC champ Ronda Rousey was tough, but apparently she's also quite the comedian — and not afraid to touch sensitive material. For example, "Access Hollywood" sat down with Rousey — promoting her role in the "Entourage" movie — and asked how she'd fare against boxing champ and noted domestic violence enthusiast Floyd Mayweather. "Well, I would never say that I can't beat anyone, but I don't think me and him would ever fight," Rousey responds. "Unless we ended up dating." Zing!

Don't expect that love connection anytime soon, though, at least according to what kind of guy Rousey is really looking for. "Everyone expects I want these giant, burly guys, and that's not really the case. I don't come home from the gym and feel, like, super-rough. I want to be taken care of when I get home," she says. "Right now, I'm waiting for a tall, dark pediatrician or something, you know? Something like that." Something awfully specific, apparently.

4 A tribute befitting a dearly departed … blowfish?

MILEY CYRUS, FACEBOOK

So apparently the backyard sessions for Miley Cyrus' Happy Hippie Foundation aren't just going to be epic team-ups with rock greats. She's also using the platform to express her grief. Over her dead blowfish, Pablow. No, seriously. Cyrus' latest video clip features her donning a unicorn onesie and settling in behind a keyboard to sing her moving tribute to mark Pablow's passing. "How can I love someone I never touched? You lived under the water, but I love you so much," Miley sings. "You've never been on land, and you've never seen the sky. You don't know what a cloud is. Why does everything I love have to die?" It's so bizarrely moving that I feel the need to remind you about the unicorn onesie part.

2 Emily Blunt slams Cannes' 'no flats' policy

When Emily Blunt was informed about that report of Cannes Film Festival attendees being turned away from a gala premiere because they violated the fest's rumored policy of women only being able to wear high heels on the red carpet, she was not pleased. "That's very disappointing. To think there are these waves of equality and waves of people discovering that women are so fascinating and interesting to watch and bankable," she said at the news conference for "Sicario," her Cannes entry. "Everyone should wear flats, to be honest. We shouldn't be wearing high heels anyway. That's my point of view. I just prefer wearing Converse sneakers." You and me both, Em.

A Mentos and 'Bloodsport' mash-up

Oh, Internet, you're adorable. I don't know who originally had the idea to take footage of Jean-Claude Van Damme escaping some goons in the 1988 action flick "Bloodsport" and recut it to the music from a classic Mentos commercial, but that person is my favorite. The result is simple, straightforward and delightful. Of course, by now Van Damme is probably actually harassing the Mentos folks about doing a real commercial because who doesn't like being able to make rent?

Diane Lane's mommie dearest

Interview. The Oscar nominee talks "Every Secret Thing" and its look at parenthood.

In the new drama "Every Secret Thing," Diane Lane plays a bad mother whose teen daughters (Danielle Macdonald and Dakota Fanning) are suspected of kidnapping a toddler. In real life, Lane is nothing but helpful toward her young stars, having been a young actress once herself who made her debut at 14 in "A Little Romance." The film also allows the actress to work with and for women — a rarity these days.

How do you tend to deal with younger actors?
It was nice to be on the other side of the equation. I remember being a very young person working on film sets. I never really recovered from the kindness I was shown by adults when I was a young person, and am happy to reciprocate that now. It's been different from my experiences, though, what these kids had to go through because it's so grim.

She definitely has trouble connecting with both of her daughters.
As a young woman, or whatever age a person becomes a mother, you're faced with this expectation that you're going to be able to nurture somebody who has a very different proclivity than you can identify with. There's a book that was given to me called "Far From the Tree." It's a visitation with various kinds of children that are born to "normal" parents, and the challenge for the parents is to find a way to nurture somebody that is very alien to them. That's what happens in our movie — that her daughters are so completely different from her that she just doesn't identify with being their mother. That's definitely part of her failure.

GETTY IMAGES

This is also a film whose cast is largely women, and which was produced, written and directed by women, respectively Frances McDormand, Nicole Holofcener and Amy Berg. Was that a major attraction for you to get involved?
No, I just thought the topic and the book were enough. The fact that women were bringing it to life made sense, in a way. I wouldn't have noticed it if it weren't such an anomaly, sadly. As far as statistics go, it's

One more thing

There have also been films with gender-blind casting, like "Gravity."

I think we're going to see more and more of that in the future. Women are the greatest untapped resource in every field of endeavor. It's great to see the diverse experiences of women onscreen. What I loved about "Gravity" was that it didn't matter what the gender of the person was. You shared the journey of the character [played by Sandra Bullock]. It wasn't a woman's story, and it wasn't a macho story. I think what interests women and what interests men is blending, and that's a good thing. We're all complete beings, no matter what's between our legs.

noteworthy. But I don't think it's any less interesting to non-females. It's not a pandering journey into the female experience. It's just human experience.

5 Guests we'll miss on Letterman

Late night. Before tomorrow's final "Late Show," we look at some of Dave's best relationships with his regular guests.

LISA WEIDENFELD
@LisaWeidenfeld
lisa.weidenfeld@metro.us

1. Tom Hanks

Hanks has been appearing on the show since the very beginning of his career. For the Hanks completist, footage of the actor goofing off about the "Splash" premiere can be found on YouTube. While Tom Hanks seems like someone who could make friendly, engaging conversation with even the most awkward of interviewers, his years of easygoing chats with Letterman offer a timeline to the development of his persona as Hollywood's favorite nice guy.

JEFFREY R. STAAB, CBS

2. Jack Hanna

JEFFREY R. STAAB, CBS

Letterman, like many late night hosts, has been vocal about his admiration for Johnny Carson. It's not that surprising, then, that he continued one of Carson's traditions: inviting on an expert to learn about wild animals. Jack Hanna appeared many times over the years, bringing everything from cheetahs to camels to the "Late Show" to show off to a delighted audience.

3. Amy Sedaris

Sedaris is in some ways an ideal "Late Show" guest. She may not always have the trendiest project to promote, but that only means her appearances are more geared toward her own special brand of Amy Sedaris-ness. Conversations go in unexpected directions, she's full of advice, and sometimes she even has a craft project (even Jimmy Fallon lets her do her own projects instead of playing games). Letterman had her on repeatedly over the years, recognizing that, for most people, watching her talk for 10 minutes is entertainment enough.

PAUL FILO, CBS

4. Julia Roberts

As we learned last week, Julia Roberts has been a guest on Letterman's show over two dozen times. And just in case you're thinking, well, of course, she must have appeared for her breakthrough role in "Pretty Woman," you'd be wrong. Her time on his show dates all the way back to "Mystic Pizza." And we have to give Roberts some kudos: In her final appearance, she called him out for being condescending to young actresses. To Letterman's credit, he seemed honestly apologetic for his earlier behavior. Only someone he had a solid bond with could provoke that kind of self-reflection.

JEFFREY R. STAAB, CBS

5. Oprah Winfrey

JEFFREY R. STAAB, CBS

If nothing else, Oprah's appearance during Letterman's final run of shows demonstrates how much the man has changed over the years. The duo had a long-standing feud for years, during which Winfrey refused to appear on his show, and Letterman razzed her about it. A thaw began a few years ago when the two appeared in a Super Bowl commercial together, and in recent years, they've started to seem downright chummy.

Love where you live

The garbage can you need

We have smartphones, smartwatches — and now, behold, smart garbage cans. The GeniCan prototype is a device that attaches to the inside of your garbage can and scans your discarded food packaging to compile your next shopping list straight to an app. The gadget even sorts your grocery list aisle-by-aisle before you get to the store. Currently seeking funding on website Indiegogo, inventor Rob Griffin plans to have the product ready for shipping in September. We spoke with the Connecticut native on why chucking out trash requires intelligence.

How does it work?

The GeniCan uses a barcode scanner, a microphone and other sensors to find out when an empty food item is discarded into the garbage or recycling bin. It then connects via Wi-Fi to our cloud service and stores the data of the items for viewing on a smartphone app.

The GeniCan will create your grocery list. PROVIDED

Why is the GeniCan better than traditional shopping lists?

Items can be added without touching a pen, phone or keyboard in a few seconds. The GeniCan also sorts your grocery list aisle-by-aisle, matches coupons to the items on your list and has the ability to skip the store altogether by using automatic delivery services like Amazon.

It sounds like the GeniCan will do a lot more than collect trash. Does it even take it out?

No, but it can tell the responsible person of the household that the garbage is full. We also have commercial plans to offer the GeniCan in many service businesses where inventory for items could be made easier, like nail salons, hair salons and others.

An unusual social gathering will prove to be a starting point for a promising partnership. A romantic relationship may become strained if you spend too much time apart.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21
You will have to make revisions to some personal paperwork. A fast talker will try to swindle you into making a financial commitment.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21 Simplify your life by making a point to stop trying to please everyone else. No matter what course you take, there will always be someone who objects.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Don't ignore minor aches and pains. Physical issues will escalate if you aren't practical regarding your lifestyle.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Love is on the rise. Be attentive but not possessive. If you are single, attend a social event to meet someone.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20
Someone close to you will let you down. Don't dwell on disappointment.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20
Dust off your sense of adventure. Trying a new activity will introduce you to new people and experiences. EUGENIA LAST

Letters to the editor

Honoring fallen Officer Brian Moore

We have lost police Officer Brian Moore of the 105th precinct, who died in the line of duty. He was a brave and dedicated officer and, at the age of 25, had an exemplary career. I think it is time to honor him in a way that shows that he was a shining example for our youth. I therefore have a suggestion. I live in Glen Oaks Village on Commonwealth Boulevard, and there is an athletic field being built. Anthony, one of the workers there, tells me there will be a soccer field, baseball diamond, football field and track. The athletic field is in the 105th precinct and located at 76-10 Commonwealth Boulevard, and it would be a great tribute to Officer Moore if the field was named after him. Furthermore, we would be honoring what he stood for and his memory would not be forgotten. Our youth would be reminded every day they would play there that Brian Moore was dedicated to serving and protecting the community. As such, hopefully they would be inspired to be the best they could be. I therefore ask all of our politicians to look into the possibility that this field be named "The Brian Moore Athletic Field — The Field of Dreams." Please let it happen.

Extra work

The NFL will make life harder on kickers in 2015 as owners approved a proposal to snap the ball from the 15-yard line on extra points. The ball was previously placed at the 2. On 2-point conversions, the ball will remain at the 2, but now defenses will have a chance to score two points of their own if a turnover occurs. Only Washington and Oakland voted against the proposal.

Knicks with zero luck, get hosed at draft lotto

NBA. Minnesota lands at No. 1 while the Knicks tumble to No. 4.

The Lakers moved up and got the second pick in the draft lottery Tuesday night while the no-luck Knicks landed at No. 4. The Timberwolves landed the top overall pick. / GETTY IMAGES

Conspiracy theorists thinking that the NBA wanted one of its marquee, large-market franchises to nab a top pick in the 2015 NBA draft weren't exactly silenced Tuesday night at the draft lottery. The Los Angeles Lakers moved up from the 4 spot to the 2 spot thanks to a lucky Ping-Pong ball bounce and the Knicks were on the receiving end of a cruel lotto blow as they fell from 2 to 4.

New York owned a 19.9 percent chance of landing the No. 1 pick in the lottery. a 38 percent chance to land a top two pick and a 55 percent chance to land a top three pick. The odds weren't great, but it's an extreme disappointment for the Knicks — a franchise that rarely found itself with a chance to land the No. 1 pick in the lottery, even after brutal seasons, thanks to years of going for the "quick fix." This season, New York finished with a 17-65 record, blatantly shooting for the No. 1 or at least No. 2 selection.

Duke's Jahlil Okafor and Kentucky's Karl-Anthony Towns have emerged, in recent weeks, as the decided 1-2 picks in this year's draft.

In Metro's latest NBA Mock Draft, Emmanuel Mudiay — the point guard who plays in China — went No. 3 overall and Duke swingman Justise Winslow went No. 4. The Knicks may opt to package the pick in a trade and follow the model the Boston Celtics created back in 2007 when it didn't get any lottery luck. Boston fell to the 5 spot that year, and flipped the pick in a deal that landed Ray Allen. The Celtics already had a Carmelo Anthony-like star in Paul Pierce and eventually convinced Kevin Garnett to waive his no-trade clause to come to Boston. The Celtics won the NBA title the very next year. Knicks president Phil Jackson said he would be open to anything, but cautioned that a turnaround won't happen overnight.

"We don't expect to go to the championship next year. I mean, that would be talking crazy," Jackson said at the end of the Knicks' season. "But we really do think progressively we're going to get better. I don't think teams move as rapidly as that in this league. I think you have to take substantial steps, and that's what we want to do."

Undisciplined play won't fly in Tampa Bay

NHL. Rangers must clean up their act as series shifts to Florida for Game 3.

Anger was palpable.

Anger at what had transpired. Anger at an opportunity missed.

Anger at themselves.

"It's embarrassing," Ryan McDonagh said after the Rangers were outclassed by the Lightning, 6-2, in Game 2 of the Eastern Conference finals. The best-of-seven is tied one game apiece, with Game 3 set for Wednesday at Amalie Arena (8 p.m., NBCSN).

There was precious little the Rangers could point to as positives coming out of the nationally televised rout, outside of the two power-play goals scored by Chris Kreider and Derek Stepan.

The Rangers surrendered the first hat trick in Lightning playoff history to Tyler Johnson within the first 28:17 of the game. A lack of discipline was costly as Tampa scored three power-play goals. Fallen Rangers led to the game-opening 3-on-5 shorthanded goal and Johnson's hat trick goal. The Rangers had 14 giveaways.

"We worked hard, but I don't think we were very smart," said Henrik Lundqvist, who yielded all six Lightning goals. "[Taking] penalties, losing the puck in the wrong area, it's something we have to work on and do a lot better in the next game.

Nine Lightning players recorded at least one point, led by the triumvirate of Johnson, Alex Killorn [two goals and an assist] and Nikita Kucherov [three assists] who finished with three points each. Steven Stamkos [a power-play goal and an assist] and Valtteri Filppula [two assists] followed with two points apiece. The Rangers' stars, by comparison, have struggled. Martin St. Louis has six assists in the playoffs, but has not scored a goal. Rick Nash has scored just two goals.

"There is no doubt their top players had a very strong game, and a couple of our guys didn't have their best game," Rangers head coach Alain Vigneault said.
